

TOKYO's ARCHITECTURE AND URBANISM 1945-1980

lecture by Raffaele Pernice

UNSW Sydney, School of Built Environment

The end of the World War II, which was heralded by the surrender of Japan on 2nd September 1945, left Tokyo and other major Japanese cities in ruins. With the cities in rubble, the industrial and economic structures on their knees, and a society profoundly shaken by the defeat in war and the humiliation of the surrender, Japan languished for several years. In the following decades Japan embarked in an impressive process of national growth thanks to ambitious programs of infrastructure and industrial development which turned the country in a laboratory of original and influential ideas in architecture and design. The lecture will outline the key Japanese architects, projects and concepts in the architectural and urban context of Japan, and their contribution to the international cultural debate between 1945-1980.

27.05
2024
10.00 am
ROOM B5
PIAZZA BORGHESE 9

The lecture is part of the thematic lecture series "After the War" within the research project "War is (not) Over. Destruction and reconstruction in the urban theaters of war: from Berlin to Mariupol" coordinated by Giusi Ciotoli.

Masters Degree Architecture (Conservation) | Urban Morphology Course

DIPARTIMENTO
DI ARCHITETTURA E PROGETTO
SAPIENZA
UNIVERSITÀ DI ROMA

AFTER THE WAR